

About Me

I was born in South Korea and immigrated to the United States when I was three. My brother and I were raised by a single mother who had a Union job as a nurse's aide. After high school, I went to the University of Washington and Bellevue College to study Computer Science.

As a 35-year resident of King County, I've worked in the IT departments at Boeing, Norstrom, Microsoft, and the University of Washington School of Nursing.

After leading the community security mailbox and neighborhood cleanup programs, I was encouraged to run for city council by neighbors. I was elected to the city council in 2015 and have served for ten years.

I serve on many local regional boards and committees to improve neighborhoods in South King County and to better coordinate between cities. Nationally, I am on the board of the National League of Cities.
